Hd screen recorder video recorder xrecorder

Free screen recorders have come a long way in recent years, and there are now some very impressive tools available that can capture everything that happens on your screen completely free, and without any frustrating limitations. The best free screen recorder is OBS Studio. A remarkable program with a set of features that rivals those of the most upscale tools, it can not only record everything that happens on your desktop, but also capture images from your webcam and use it for image video in the image, and even record audio from a microphone. It also gives you the ability to record the results in a format of your choice, or to stream them through the service of your choice. Yet while OBS Studio is definitely an ideal choice for professionals and players, there are other capable options that are worth considering. If you only need to capture a few minutes of images, a simpler tool can be all you need. So we've put together the best free screen recorders for all projects and experience levels. Whether you're doing a software tutorial for your YouTube channel, recording a Let's Play video or capturing a video call, there's something here that will match the bill. The best free screen recorder right now is: Flashback Pro Flashback Pro offers a much more comprehensive set of tools than the free Flashback Express version listed below, including the ability to edit video and audio frame by frame, add images in the video image and annotations. It's not free like the options below, but if you need something for professional use on a regular basis, then it might be worth the investment. See Deal (image credit: OBS Studio Contributors; Shutterstock) The best screen recorder for any software, including games if you are a passionate player, OBS Studio is easily the best free screen recorder for you. Unlike the hugely popular FRAPS (which only allows you to record 30 seconds at a stretch, unless you've purchased a license, and apply a watermark on the resulting images), OBS Studio is open source, and completely free to use without restrictions. OBS Studio supports streaming and recording in high definition, with no restrictions on the number or duration of your creations. You can stream live on Twitch or YouTube games, record projects and come back to them later, or encode your images in FLV format and record them locally. Since OBS Studio can record directly from your graphics card, it is able to capture games running in full-screen mode (many Screen recorders can only record if the game is window), with customizable hotkey keys to control the recording. OBS Studio can also fully use multi-core processors to improve performance, and can record at 60FPS (or even more). It may take a little while to set it up exactly the way you want it, but OBS Studio is by far the best and most powerful screen recorder for players. Despite being a free version of a paid program, FlashBack Express won't put ugly watermarks on your records or impose time limits, and it's packed with features and tools that rival many premium programs. Its interface is less intimidating than OBS Studio, so if you've never used a screen recorder before, it's a great choice. You can record from your entire screen, a window, a selected area or a webcam. Once you're done, your recording will appear in a simple editor, where you can crop it and cut it to your needs, then export it to YouTube, an FTP server, or your PC. It's all pretty standard fare for a free screen recorder, but take a minute to dive into the advanced Flashback options and you'll find a multitude of carefully designed settings that will make your desktop recordings look really professional. The recorder can automatically hide passwords entered on the screen, replace your silly wallpaper with a simple wallpaper, hide messy desktop icons, and highlight your mouse pointer to make it easier to follow. There is also a dedicated game mode that allows you to set the number of images recorded per second. There is no limit to the length of your recordings unless you choose to set one, which can be useful if there is a chance that you accidentally part of the recorder. You can also choose to break down long records into pieces - a brilliant touch that helps you avoid creating huge heavy files. Your records won't be watermarked either. Following a recent update, Flashback Express can export in WMV, AVI and MP4 formats, eliminating the need for a separate video converter, and it no longer requires a free license key for activation - just install the software and you're ready to start recording. Developer Blueberry Software has also released a free screen recorder designed specifically for games - FBX. This recorder captures HD footage in the game, with hardware acceleration for AMD and Nvidia cards, and Intel CPUs.If you're considering switching to FlashBack Pro, Blueberry software offers TechRadar readers an exclusive 25% discount. This tool based on the may not be suitable for games, but it is the best free screen recorder for all other tasks. The first time you use Apowersoft Free Online Screen Recorder, you will be asked to download a small launcher app. You then have a control bar filled with more options than in most desktop screen recording software. You can capture images from your desktop or webcam, and record audio from your PC, microphone, both or neither. You can save the entire screen, select an area manually, or choose one Pre-defined resolutions - ideal if you're recording a clip for YouTube, for example, and you dont want to use a separate video editor to resize it later. Apowersoft Free Online Screen Recorder also offers customizable keyboard shortcuts for speed and convenience. You can choose whether or not to include the cursor in the recording and choose from a range of output formats, including MP4, WMV, AVI, MOV and many others. You can even add annotations during recording. Once you're done, you can save the recording as a video file or GIF, upload it directly to YouTube or Vimeo, or send it to Google Drive or Dropbox. You can also edit the clip. Selecting this option will allow you to download an additional component - Apowersoft Video Editor - that allows you to make simple adjustments before exporting your video to your favorite format. A truly exceptional tool. Note that the Download desktop button connects to a program called Apowersoft Screen Recorder Pro. This is a trial version of a premium application, and is more limited than Online Screen Recorder.Read our full review Apowersoft Free Screen Recorder (Image Credit: NCH Software; Shutterstock) Debut Video Capture is a new addition to our roundup of free screen recorders, and although its slightly dated design does it little favors, it's an extremely powerful program that can do much more than just capture what's happening on your PC screen. In addition to basic screen recording (no time limit or watermark), Debut Video Capture can also record footage from external devices, including webcams and security cameras. It can even record on a regular schedule, which means it can become the main center of a home security system. Not too shabby for a totally free program for personal use. There are no post-production editing tools, but you can apply filters and add your own captions and watermarks before you start recording. There is no option to export videos directly to YouTube or Facebook, but they can be saved in all major formats, including MP4, MOV and AVI (to name three). Debut Video Capture is currently in public beta, so we look forward to seeing the final version with an extra shot of varnish soon. There are no watermarks or time limits but the interface is not the most intuitive in the world, so you'll be better off using keyboard shortcuts. For a quick reference, you can start a recording by tapping Shift- Print Screen, and stop it again using Ctrl - Shift - Print Screen.You can also use this free screen recorder to record your capture as a GIF rather than a video file, which can be extremely useful for sharing on forums and social media. Not only is ShareX among the best free screen recorders, but it can also capture an entire scroll capture and identify text via OCR, and even capture your screen according to a calendar. Another of its best features is the ability to send your captures and videos directly to a file sharing or social media site. There is a wide range of options you can check out on the project website. Unfortunately, ShareX does not support support screenshots or recordings of games running in full-screen mode. Other than that, it's a great screen recorder that will serve you extremely well. Read our full review of ShareX (Image Credit: Screencast-O-Matic; Shutterstock) A free browser-based screen recorder with a lot to offerScreencast-O-Matic is another free browser-based screen recorder, and a very capable of that. Recordings are limited to 15 minutes in length, but you can record as many clips as you like, zoom in while recording, cut your recorded clips, add captions, save them to your desktop, YouTube or cloud, share a video link, or add one of 30 free music tracks to royaltySHit 'Start recording for free', followed by 'Launch free recorder'. As with Apowersoft Free Online Screen Recorder, you will be asked to download and install a small web launcher, after which the screen recorder will be launched. Prepare your screen and adjust the size of the recording window to suit your needs (it can record the entire screen or just a selected area), then press the red button. You can capture audio from your PC or microphone, and record footage from your screen, webcam or both. Upgrading to a Deluxe account gives you additional features, including scripted recordings, drawings and annotations, a video editor, and (perhaps most usefully) the ability to generate captions automatically with text to speech. It's an impressive set of tools for $1.65 (about 1, AU$2.50) per month, but the free version of Screencast-O-Matic has a lot to offer as well. The only real downside is that your records will be watermarked unless you upgrade, but if that's not a problem, then this free screen recorder is well worth a look. To watch.
